THE PEOPLE'S FOREIGN POLICY

There is a psychological problem in United States foreign policy, lying in the popular feeling that this government is somehow inadequate to deal with foreign diplomats on even terms. It is manifest in the numerous expressions of mistrust which are voiced when the United States participates in international conferences. The blight it places on confidence in America's ability to attain amicable and reasonable settlements of war problems is serious.

Too many Americans are believing and saying that their representatives in dealings with Great Britain and Russia, for instance, are no match for the cold realism of Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin. Through lack of faith in their own statesmen, they impugn sinister motives willy-nilly to the statesmen of other countries—and are despairingly certain that the latter's ability will be turned to good use at the expense of American naivete. It is not a new misgiving, indeed it goes all the way back to the period of World War I and further, but it is a disturbing thing and needs to be faced for the sake of unity on foreign policy matters.

There is an obvious lack either of education concerning foreign policy, or of clarity in United States policy itself which makes education impossible. It is a fact that the people have not understood their government's foreign policy in relation to Japan, to Spain, to Turkey and to South America. They have understood it only imperfectly in relation to France, the republics of South America and China. They are confused on many points concerning Great Britain and Russia.

This kind of uncertainty is not healthy in a democracy, where in theory at least foreign policy grows out of the people. If there is any one danger of a wholesale reversion to isolation and disillusionment that is more acute than all the others, this is it. If the American people knew better what their government was aiming to do, they would have more confidence on the occasions when they realize that their government is making the decisions and commitments which ultimately the people will have to back up with their resources.

POLITICAL PROBLEM OF TAXATION

It is apparent that congress intends to pass a tax bill below the Roosevelt administration's recommended rates of increase. The political problems of taxation has come to the fore.

As far as finances are concerned, it can be argued logically that the administration's recommendations are sound. But as far as politics is concerned, congress is being just as realistic in another direction.

The nation's ability to produce revenue is not merely a matter of balances and proportions, but also a matter of public opinion—and on matters of public opinion congressmen are better informed than the financial experts who advise the treasury. They are motivated by more than whim in their refusal to go the limit on tax boosts.

There is a limit to what the people are willing to pay which is separate from the limit of what they can pay, according to statistics. The conflict between those limits has set the administration and congress at odds on the pending tax bill.

The omen for a future policy of unlimited spending is not good; even with the excuse of war to support it, the policy has run into strong opposition in the 78th congress. What may happen to it in the 79th and subsequent congresses is something for the New Deal's John Maynard Keynes school of spenders to conjecture about with horror. All their lovely theories of vast federal spending programs for everything conceivable are being knocked in the head by the new congressional attitude.

The job will not be complete until congressional refusal to go the limit on taxes is accompanied by insistence on cutting down, wherever possible, expenditures being supported by deficit financing. A constantly mounting debt in wartime is inevitable, but if the new congressional attitude means anything it seems to mean that congress is aware of a popular feeling that taxation should be stabilized and spending reduced until the government's financial affairs are brought into balance.

LADY WITH A STORY

Probably it's too late to do anything about it, unless the revenue bill is thrown out and the whole tax question reopened, but it looks as though congress should call on Miss Vivien Kellems for her point of view. Miss Kellems is the lady manufacturer who recently said that if the treasury wanted to make something out of the fact she believed in post-war reserves even at the expense of not paying taxes, she was ready to play rough. Thereafter, she proceeded to make some pointed remarks about the difference between taxes for winning the war and taxes for bigger and better boondoggling. She also said she would like to tell about some of the boondoggling.

Miss Kellems may not be a financial expert, but she knows enough about running a business to keep one running, and she seems to know just enough about the state of public opinion on taxation to be a bell ringer. The trouble with hearings on important legislation like revenue bills is the way they get loaded up with dignitaries who have forgotten how to talk the people's language. For years, it has looked like a good idea to have just some ordinary citizen named Jim Jones go down and talk about taxes; Miss Kellems doesn't fill that bill, but she sounds like a lady who could give a taxation committee a run for its money.

As for publicity, which is not to be sneezed at in a matter of this nature, nothing could be guaranteed, but one will get you two in this corner that Miss Kellems—off her own record—would make more excitement than Washington has had in a committee hearing since the midjet sat on J. P. Morgan's knees.

WAR EFFORT IS MORE THAN THEORY

It is as foolish to claim that national service would save the country as it is to claim it would do irreparable damage. Laws are never that potent.

The national service issue is in danger of being taken over by debaters of theory, and the war effort is more than theory. It is millions of men in uniform using war material produced by millions of citizens in factories and on farms—all of them working with a common purpose.

The question is not whether a national service law is good theory, but whether a national service law would be good practice under circumstances existing in 1944. Chief of the circumstances is the fact that the proposal is not supported by labor unions, whose members are at the heart of most industrial war production. Their opposition would be of major importance in attempt to enforce such a law.

There is, furthermore, nothing in the record of the Roosevelt administration to suggest that it would not continue to be acutely aware of the opposition of organized labor to an unpopular policy. It is not, after all, the theorists and the experts on morale who are making this the arsenal of democracy, but the people who are doing the work—the people who have been doing it so well so far that most production goals have been reached on schedule, or ahead of schedule. Until it can be shown that a national service law could improve war production and the nation's war effort, congress will be an dshould be from Missouri.

THE STARS SAY:

For Wednesday, January 26

THERE ARE certain prospects of progress in business and affairs generally, but this may depend entirely upon the patience, perseverance, diligence and well-organized plans and programs of those affected by a planetary slowing down of forces and disposition, with inertia and indifference to make a winning attack on opposing factors, with limitations and depressions. Avoid morbid attitudes toward difficulties and disappointments. Only a direct, energetic and determined attack on stubborn obstacles or crystallized conditions will succeed.

If It Is Your Birthday

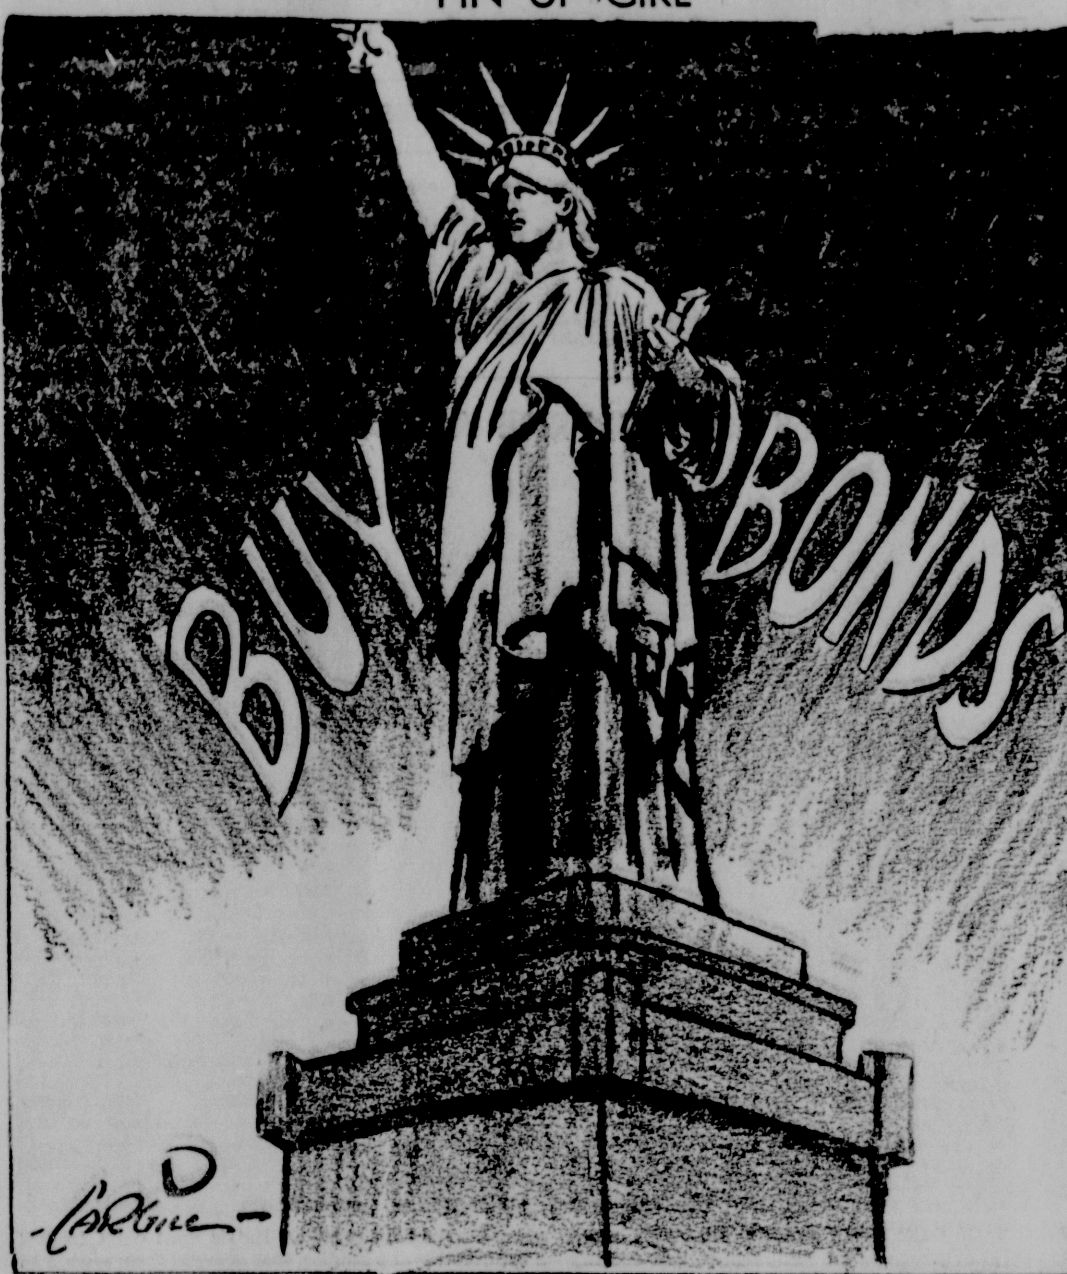

Those whose birthday it is may be called upon to summon all their latent ability, fortitude, persistence and industry to bring to bear on static or crystallized conditions, or stubborn obstacles which seem insurmountable. Particularly as the physical energies and mental morbidity may be difficult to rouse from an attitude of hopelessness. However, it is only necessary to shake out of this inertia, and make plans for constructive programs for more auspicious times, most probably tomorrow.

A child born on this day should have much latent talent, with studious and deep-seated mind, logical and decisive, but may have to surmount obstacles.

If all war expenditures had been watched as carefully as the expenditures of the colleges, the cost of the war might have been reduced from one-third to one-half—Dr. William P. Tolley, president Association of American Colleges.

Season for Whooping Cough Approaches

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
THE SEASON for whooping cough is at hand. It begins in the Northern States in January and February. In the Southern States the peak of incidence is in May.

Dr. Clendenning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

And the season for this disease last a long time, running into the summer months. Indeed in epidemics many new cases occur in the early summer months.

Inexperienced parents are likely to regard it as a mild childhood disease. But it is far from that.

The little patients may become very sick. Complications, such as pneumonia, make it very dangerous. So, precautions and proper treatment are always in order.

The prevention of whooping cough by the use of pertussis vaccine is fairly, although not universally, successful. The vaccine should be given between the ages of six and twelve months. A vaccine and an antigen are also used in the treatment, but not with any great measure of success.

Use of Adrenal Cortex
A new treatment which will be somewhat surprising to most doctors is the use of adrenal cortex. At least it is surprising to me, and I don't see how anyone thought of it. But it has a good theoretical basis I admit now that it has been explained to me.

Not the least dangerous of the symptoms of whooping cough is the vomiting. This comes at the end of prolonged coughing fits and is simply a reflex due to gagging.

It is very depleting and especially because it causes a great loss of chlorides from the body. This may be the cause of the slow development of immunity in the disease, for notoriously it is of long duration, and may last several months.

The adrenal cortex helps to fix chloride in the body. That is the theoretical basis for its use, and, as I say, it seems to me sound.

At least it works in practice. Studying over three hundred cases of whooping cough, Dr. Lewis Jacobs gave over a hundred of them no specific treatment at all. These were the controls. In these the coughing lasted for 10 weeks, the whooping for five weeks and the vomiting three and a half weeks. Other groups were given antigen and other pertussis vaccine with hardly any improvement in the duration of these symptoms over the controls.

The group to whom adrenal cortex was given showed that coughing lasted at most four and a half weeks (as contrasted with 10 weeks for the controls), the whooping lasted two to three weeks (controls five weeks), and the vomiting one to two weeks (controls three and a half weeks).

Old fashioned treatments should not be abandoned while giving this new remedy. The standby is a snug abdominal binder to give the whooper something to cough against. Fresh air and small feedings rather than large are also helpful.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

K. W. S.: How often should a person with a rheumatic heart and mitral stenosis be checked up by a doctor?

Answer: In my opinion, only when symptoms appear—the important symptom being shortness of breath on very slight exertion. I do not think these people should be reminded that they are invalids. But if you want a schedule, supposing the condition is discovered at the age of 15, the patient should be examined at these ages—25, 35, 40, 45, 47, 49, 51, 52, etc.

L. M. K.: A friend of mine who has a cancer is going to a doctor who gives her treatment, but he does not believe in X-rays. She is spending a lot of money, although the family is not well off.

Answer: Cancer is treated only by surgery, X-ray or radium. A doctor who does not use one or two of those is a fake.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendenning has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendenning, 235 E. 45th st., New York. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Washington Round-up

News and Views, Briefly
On What's Going On In Capital

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Southern members of Congress and of the Democratic national committee, most of whom have a strong conviction President Roosevelt will seek election for a fourth term, are looking for a Dixie man to share the ticket with him.

Just who the southern vice-presidential candidate should be hasn't been decided but the groundwork of the campaign has been laid and at least four men have been given a thought: Gov. J. Melville Broughton of North Carolina, Governor Ellis Arnall of Georgia, speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas, and war mobilization director James F. Byrnes, a former senator from South Carolina.

None of the southerners is forgetting that the man who'll have the best chance probably will be the man President Roosevelt picks.

RELIEF TROUBLES

There's a new snag in the way of the administration's plan to obtain house clearance for United States participation in foreign relief to the extent of $1,350,000,000. Rep. O'Connor (D-Montana), wants the U. S. share cut to $600,000,000. "We must not lose our senses. If we consult our heart we would help everyone, but somewhere along the line we must consult our minds."

SOLDIER VOTE

Despite a compromise bill on the soldier vote pin—a compromise aimed at settling the differences between the states over "states' rights"—southern senators are seeking amendments to the new bill which would make it more specific in its protection of state privileges. Some opponents express belief that not only would the amendments throw cloud of every federal war ballot cast, it would revive poll tax requirements which were waived for service men two years ago. Other protests to the pending bill as it stands now were from Senator Taft (R-Ohio) who said he would insist the federal ballot commission distribute and collect state ballots with federal ballots and from Taft and Senator Byrd (D-Va) who objected to a provision to let service men vote "straight tickets," without naming candidates.

THE LITTLE DOG BARKED

by ANNE ROWE

SYNOPSIS

Helen Turner, novelist, arrives at North Harbor, Maine, enroute to the nearby Fern Cove summer theatre, where her first play is to be given a try-out, prior to its Broadway presentation. Pacing the station platform, she heartily wishes she had accompanied her husband, Lee, on his South American business trip instead of heading home. An ancient jalousy finally comes to a stop and its kindly old driver apologizes for keeping her waiting. Old Mack explains that the Kilborns, who manage Fern Cove had forgotten she was coming and Tom Linwood, the director, was too busy rehearsing this week's play. She learns that Fern Cove is jointly owned by wealthy Burns Loring, scenic designer, his sister, Mrs. Parris, and playwrights Ames Alden and George Vickery. Helen recalls that her collaborator, Stuart Argue, had quarreled with Alden and Vickery. She is puzzled when Mack drives past the trimming inn and theatre, finally coming to a pause in a clearing hemmed in by a thick woods, where, at the water's edge, an unpainted, bulking merged with the landscape. This, explained old Mack, is where she and Alden, the young actress from New York, are to stay, adding: "It's called the dog-house 'cause the owners put the unwelcome guests here."

Helen's anger mounted when she beheld the musty, ill-furnished room assigned her. A local school-marm in winter, but maid-of-all-work in summer, helps her unpack. Helen suspects that Alden and Vickery are responsible for the deplorable treatment accorded her. She confronts the Kilborns, a shrewd looking couple, who insist the new inn is filled to capacity. They reluctantly admit an expensive suite of rooms will be available the following day and Helen agrees to pay the exorbitant rate they demand for it.

CHAPTER SIX

My enemies were sitting on one side of the table in it, shouting and gesticulating at their vis-a-vis. They were Ames Alden and George Vickery. I recognized them readily from the pictures I'd seen in the papers and both far along in middle age. Alden short and squat, with a head too large for his body and a face demonstrating Darwin's theory. Vickery long and lean, with a big hook of a nose and a turkey-gobbler neck.

And the object of their persuasions, a handsome, florid man a good decade their junior was leaning in the corner of the booth opposite them, watching their bluster with obvious disdain.

He was the first of the trio to see me, and the play of expressions across his face—from surprise to shocked realization of my identity, to malicious glee—was worth paying admission to see. He didn't try to warn his companions of my presence either, did nothing to prevent Vickery's boastful: "Wait till I get hold of that fool woman! I'll tell her."

"Go right ahead and tell!" I interrupted coolly, stepping close to the table. "The fool woman is listening."

He stopped open-mouthed, in mid-sentence and mid-gesture, his arm in the air. And Alden goggled at me out of popping eyes. Only the actor—Wells Colby—got up, bowed and said: "Mrs. Turner?—But, of course!" with an amused smile.

I acknowledged the greeting briefly and went on with what I'd come to say.

"I don't think you need bother explain. As it happens, I've been sitting two booths down and—er—heard all. That's why I'm here. Your judgment of me and my work, based on complete ignorance of both, so impressed me, I simply had to tell you how grateful I am for your bad opinion. Really, nothing could be more flattering." Then I threw a quick: "Thanks for refusing to sabotage my play," to the grinning actor, and walked out.

Once outside, I kept on walking. Blindly. Too angry and too absorbed in my predicament to notice where I was going.

The few hours since my arrival had been so different from what I'd expected, so full of unforeseen trouble and insult, I had to sort things out in my mind, decide what to do.

Should I wire an S O S to McVane? No. The wire would have to be sent from the inn. It would be as good as advertising my distress. A letter? It would take too long to do any good.

A long-distance call would be best. There must be a soundproof telephone booth somewhere in the inn.

And then my heart dropped, clear into my shoes, as I remembered something Tyler McVane had said at our last meeting. About going on a vacation this week, to some retreat, known only to himself. And that he would "drop from the sky, ready to be surprised" opening night.

That meant I'd have to fight my battle alone and unaided against those two awful men and the Parris clan—including Burns Loring, the scenic designer, most likely, as Mrs. Parris' brother—and heaven knew how many of the cast. Against Tom Linwood also, I feared. His loyalty looked more than doubtful.

Actually, the only allies on whom I could rely were the two young people imported from New York for my play: Orrie Paulsen, the leading man, and Linda Barolle, the ingenue. And of the two, the girl was more a responsibility than an asset.

She was closely connected with McVane. Not in the ugly sense hinted broadly by the ugly Alden. She was McVane's ward. The daughter of a friend, or something of the kind. And he had begged me to look after her a bit, seeing she hadn't been on the stage long.

Thinking of the girl made me realize she might have arrived by now and I'd better get back to the old inn and explain matters to her.

That's when I discovered I'd been walking in the wrong direction, away from my temporary quarters, instead of toward it, on the shore road.

It was much farther inland here, and the water was on my left, not on the right where it should have been. The path formed the approach to a few large private homes set well back in spacious grounds. The lairs of my enemies, most likely.

I suppose I should have turned back the moment the thought occurred to me, but my feminine curiosity got the better of me, and I walked on.

The place I was passing really was worth looking at. The grounds were blazing with roses, and the house—a weathered wooden affair with many ells and wings—was covered with ramblers and a variety of creepers, some of them in bloom.

A group of young people was sitting on the large, covered porch of the house, laughing and talking. They fell silent as I went by and glanced in my direction.

I thought nothing of it. Strangers probably were a rarity on this semi-private road. I didn't even connect the sudden whoops of joy that followed the silence with myself.

That is, until I heard a high, shrill yelp behind me and, turning involuntarily, saw a furry ball of concentrated fury shoot out and hurl itself after me. A small dog, ears flattened and teeth bared in a vicious snarl. Out for a good nip at my legs, at least.

Seeing I like dogs, and certainly am not afraid of them, the frenzy of the little beast—a white spitz with tawny overtones—struck me as terribly funny. Instead of running away, as the person who had set the dog on me plainly hoped and expected, I started to laugh. And when my tiny pursuer came near, I crouched down on the ground and asked: "What d'you think you are doing? Who sicked you on me, bad doggie?"

My laughter, or perhaps the undismayed tone of my voice, brought the dog up short so abruptly, his stiffened forepaws dug deep into the soft earth. His snarling lips straightened, his flattened ears jerked up one by one, his head cocked sideways and his clever black eyes regarded me with evil-dent perplexity.

I kept on talking to him. All the usual nonsense of "pretty doggie" and "what's the matter, pup?" and at last reached out my hand—watching for a quick snap that did not come—to scratch his head.

The yelping and snarling had given way to a soft rumbling in the small dog's throat under my soothing treatment, and he submitted to my touch with an apologetic little whimper.

Indian Chief Teaches Trick of Stalking Enemy To Soldiers

(By United Press)

CAMP ELLIS, Ill.—Miles S. Horn, who is "White Crow" to his Arakara Indian fellow-tribesmen and "Chief" to his Army buddies, would rather shoot a bow-and-arrow than a Garand, and he can stalk a man as well as a puma.

That's why he's teaching his craft now to soldiers training in commando and ranger tactics.

"Stalking game requires all a man's cunning," the 50-year-old Indian corporal says. "He must know how to hide better than the animal he is after. That's why I want to teach all I know to other soldiers who are learning how to stalk the most dangerous prey."

Born on the Fort Berthold Indian reservation near Bismarck, N. D., he has had a varied career as a trapper and hunter, baseball player, missionary, range-rider in Montana, movie actor and artist. He has been married twice, once to a beautiful Cheyenne and once to a comely Sioux, and is the father of seven children.

Skilled Trapper, Hunter

It was the trapping and hunting that developed Horn's stalking prowess. He always has returned to the woods when other livelihoods failed and the going got tough.

His baseball career was limited to a season at Gratiot, N. D., where he played with Walter Johnson the year before the latter joined the Washington Senators.

In his grease-paint days, Horn played in the Fox movie, "The Ore-

MOTHER

A new and exclusive picture of Mrs. Ida Elizabeth Eisenhower, 83-year-old mother of General Dwight Eisenhower, leader of the Allied invasion army. She dropped her shoes around the house to sit for this remarkable portrait.

WHEN General Dwight Eisenhower made a secret and hurried visit to the United States enroute from the Mediterranean to England to head the Allied invasion forces, he took time out to fly to Kansas for a brief reunion with his family and particularly his mother, Mrs. Ida Elizabeth Eisenhower. To this 83-year-old mother of an eminent son, the visit must have been particularly gratifying. To the nation it was a typically American gesture, the successful son returning home for his mother's blessing before tackling the toughest job he has yet been called upon to face—the crossing of the English channel in the attack on Hitler's fortress Europe. Mrs. Eisenhower has had her own "channels" to cross. At five, with seven brothers, she was orphaned. At seven, she had learned to make big pies in the old brick oven stove; to roast ducks and chickens and cook for ten people. She lives quietly and thriftily in Abilene, Kan. She still does most of her own housework. When the mothers of the town gather to talk of their fighting sons she says, simply and characteristically, "I've got a boy in the Army, too."

Her "four-star" son, General Dwight D. Eisenhower.

gon Trail," with Tom Mix and the as yet undiscovered Gary Cooper. He was featured as the buffalo herdsman.

Horn's favorite painting subject is the buffalo, although he has painted and sketched prairies, coyotes, Indian encampments and other outdoor subjects.

His buffalo paintings have been exhibited in some of the country's galleries. One painting, owned by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, has been shown in the White House.

Coverage for active service now, the Arakara corporal went into the camouflage school at Camp Claiborne, La., last July. He wants to stay in service for the duration, so he can teach the tricks of the Indian trapper to other soldiers.

Iowa 'Divided On Bricker,' Secretary Says

COLUMBUS, Jan. 25.—Robert L. Barton, Gov. John W. Bricker's secretary, returned from an Iowa trip today and reported sentiment in the mid-western state was "divided" between Bricker and Thomas E. Dewey for the Republican presidential nomination.

"There is 'little sentiment' for Wendell Wilkie, Barton added. The secretary attended a two-day conference of young Republican clubs at Des Moines and said he was told that Iowans were impressed with Bricker and would like to see more of him.

Asked whether Bricker might enter the California primary for delegates following reports Wilkie would remain out of the contest, Barton said he could not say definitely what the governor might do.

Rep. Bolton Urges Early Approval of World Relief Plan

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Rep. Frances Bolton (R-Ohio) in interviews and on the floor of the house, contends the agreement setting up the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration deserve quick approval even in the face of misgivings as to administrative and political implications of so huge and untried an organization.

"UNRRA," she said, "isn't the framework for a United States worldwide WPA; it's a combined effort of 44 nations to ease the hopeless horror of war-stricken peoples."

Of course, said Mrs. Bolton, "many mistakes will be made in this first attempt at international administration for the benefit of all. We must face that fact squarely and make the best of it. But I can see no justification in the attitude that would refuse to do because somebody somewhere would make a mistake. Such defeatism would destroy us all, and quickly."

"Just as we recognize the probability of mistakes in administration, so must we recognize and face the possible political implications of the agreement. But we can say to our people that we shall be on the watch, that we don't propose to let them misuse such an instrument as UNRRA—and that we will hold them accountable."

"Let's accept the responsibility that is ours as one of the great powers. . . . we need not, we should not do so blindly, and so lay ourselves open to disillusionment and bitterness."

"Let us rather face the possible dangers squarely, and with determined courage move out of the western hemisphere into the world."

While winning the war is the consuming necessity now, Mrs. Bolton suggested "the silencing of enemy guns will not mean the end, for then comes the moment when civilization itself is in peril."

Ferguson, Sawyer Battle Is Foreseen

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, Jan. 25.—State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson asserts he is Ohio's "favorite son" candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination and says if National Committeeman Charles Sawyer of Cincinnati battles him for control of the Buckeye delegation to the national convention "I think he will get whipped."

Neither former U. S. Sen. Robert J. Bulkley of Cleveland nor U. S. Treasurer W. A. Julian of Cincinnati, Ferguson would oppose him although both have been mentioned as possible contenders for the "favorite son" candidacy.

"I'm still the 'favorite son' candidate and I'm going to pick a slate of delegates," he said upon his return from Washington where he conferred with national Democratic heads. "I don't think Charles Sawyer will fight. If he does I think he will get whipped."

Ferguson said selection of members for the national committee would be the basis for any fight that might develop since all delegates probably would be committed to President Roosevelt for a fourth term.

His group, Ferguson disclosed, will vote for Albert A. Horstman of Dayton, state central committee chairman, so succeed Sawyer as national committeeman, and Miss Marie Dickson of Steubenville, a member of the state central committee, to succeed Mrs. Mildred Jaster of Cleveland as national committeewoman.

Rush Job On Auto Tags Proves Costly

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, Jan. 25.—Overtime work by Ohio penitentiary inmates to turn out 1944 motor vehicle license plates before a March 1 deadline will cost the state nearly $5,000, officials estimated today.

Metal for some 2,400,000 plates was not released by the federal government until last October, whereas work on new plates customarily started nearly a year in advance of their mandatory display date.

The 1944 blue tags with white numerals and letters go on sale March 1 and must be displayed on and after April 1. Only a rear plate will be issued for each vehicle, instead of the customary two. Last year windshield stickers replaced licenses because of the metal shortage.

To turn out the 1944 tags by late February, about 150 inmates have been working four hours daily, five days a week, in addition to their regular eight-hour day, Chief Clerk W. R. Bishop reported.

He said the men were paid five cents an hour for the four-hour overtime period and allowed an additional five cents an hour credit on their savings accounts. The payments are in addition to regular pay ranging from one-half cent to five cents an hour.

Highway Director Hal G. Sours urged that all old tags be turned in for salvage.

American Business Took Odd Detours During Past Year

AP Features
NEW YORK—Strange paths beckoned American businessmen in 1943 as they sought to keep capital and "know-how" employed within the limits of wartime restrictions. The major shifts, of course, were in conversion to war of automobile, aircraft, metal-working and similar industries. Along with this, a number of industries went far afield in keeping the government supplied with management and skilled workers. Rubber companies, for example, are turning out airplanes, shells, gun mounts and torpedo parts. From Cans To Torpedoes Can factories are making torpedoes. A package machinery company got so tied up making gyrocompasses for the Navy that it called on its former customers for help; now they're subcontractors for it. The list could go on indefinitely. Outside the direct war field, Twentieth Century-Fox motion picture company, changed its charter to enable it to mine, or drill for and produce oil, on its California studio properties. Commercial Investment Trust, a finance company, is keeping its money working by producing through subsidiaries such as generators, fire alarm systems and electric switches. General Tire and Rubber, in addition to developing an improved bomb-making process, entered the radio field with purchase of the Yankee Network. New England broadcasting chain. Jantzen Knitting Mills of Portland, Ore., bought a lotion made by the Santeisepic Co. of Portland, and plans to turn out also an outdoor protective cream. What Future Holds Established manufacturers wonder how many firms, particularly those who have found profitable the manufacture of war items that could find a civilian market, will be willing to revert to their former lines after the war. Aircraft concerns, for instance, face a sinking demand with the end of the war, and would like to know whether to expect competition from automobile makers now turning out planes. Conversely, it could be pointed out, the automobile men probably cocked an ear when Curtiss-Wright Corp., big warplane producer, hired a former automobile designer for research into aeronautical "and other" lines.

War Correspondent Relates Italian Invasion Incidents

BY DON WHITEHEAD
Associated Press Correspondent Representing the Combined American Press
AT THE FIFTH ARMY BEACH-HEAD SOUTH OF ROME, Jan. 23. —(Delayed)—Twenty-four hours in the life of war correspondent is not particularly important to anyone but the correspondent himself—but this chronicle will give newspaper readers a glimpse of how their news is gathered in this theater of war. As an explanation to all editors of correspondents on this show: There have been thousands of words written, but finding means of getting them back to Naples is another matter. Courier service by air and sea is a catch-as-catch-can affair. Perhaps today there will be a speed boat or plane or ship which will carry back the copy we have been unable to file by radio. For hours we have been going around with our mouths open in amazement over the ease with which the Army and Navy managed to land troops behind enemy lines. I landed with the second assault wave at 2:10 a. m. but did not see a shot fired. We just walked. That's how easy it was. Communication Poor Any amphibious operation is a nightmare for a reporter because of his communication and transportation problem during the early days of the landing when the big rush is to get troops, guns, armor and ammunition ashore as rapidly as possible. They have priority over everything else. After more than 24 hours ashore with the first assault troops to land behind the German lines I have been able to get only 250 words of copy out by radio. Correspondents attached to the Fifth army drew lots to see who would win a place with the amphibious force. I was one of seven lucky ones to win a spot and was assigned to an advance unit. We did not know when or where we were going but were told confidentially about the amphibious operation by which the Fifth army hopes to smash into the enemy's flank and thus open the road to Rome. I drew a unit commanded by Lt. Col. Lyle W. Bernard of Highland Falls, N. Y., an old friend from the Sicily campaign and one of the ablest and toughest soldiers I've ever seen. I figured it would be wise to stick close to this tall, lean soldier who had come up the hard way because he seemed to have a charmed life. He and his second in command, Maj. Lynn Fargo of Ripon, Wis., have come through some hair raising experiences together unscathed. That night we lounged in our little stateroom and drank very bad gin and very bad cognac and talked far into the morning. Next morning our ship steamed out to sea to convoy with the invasion fleet and steamed towards Rome. Everyone spent most of the day sleeping or lounging in bunks, resting for the test ahead because we thought this would be the toughest landing any of us ever made. Bernard called his officers into the wardroom to give them a briefing on the operation and to explain his plans. "There can be no withdrawal and there will be no surrender," he said. "We've got to root the bastards out with mortars and even bayonets and it will be a hard job. I'm not trying to paint a tragic picture but that's the way it looks and you might as well have it straight." After the briefing, a poker game started. Some men read, others wrote letters thinking perhaps they might be their last. Then it was time to disembark. Our ship stood at anchor about four miles off the coast. We were to land in the vicinity of Nettuno. A bell sounded and we filed onto the deck and stood at the rail as the assault boats started. Boat Leak Is Plugged We clambered down a swaying net into the boat which cleared away from the ship to join other small craft moving towards shore. Then I heard the seamen say, "This boat is leaking badly. We'll never make shore. I knew I'd get a tub like this one." But finally the leak was plugged and the boat moved on inshore with others in V formation. At 1:45 a. m. the Navy loosed a barrage on the beach and then we thought the Germans would answer with coastal defense guns, but nothing happened. Not a shot was fired from the shore. Then the boat hit the beach hard and Bernard shouted "Everybody out fast!" The soldiers swarmed over the side and splashed ashore. I dropped into hipboot water and fell headlong as the weight of my pack and bedroll threw me off balance. A soldier raised me to my feet and I hurried after the troops already filing across the sand. Later we learned the troops to our right and left walked into mines but apparently our strip of beach was unmined for I did not hear any explosion or see a shot fired by our troops although there were occasional small arms fire off at our flank. We just marched in single file across the low marshy land, stumbling through bogs and water-filled shell pits in what must have been a German artillery range. Finally we stopped and there I decided to wait for dawn and write my first dispatch to be filed by radio. All of us were soaked and for two hours we hopped and jumped about trying to warm our frozen feet and legs. Our men just kept marching straight to their objectives while armor, guns and ammunition poured ashore on a precision schedule, and then we waited to see what the Germans would do about this threat to Rome and to their Cassino lines. The tsetse fly is a carrier of sleeping sickness.

WASPs Can Take It; Ferry Biggest U.S. Planes Anywhere

By JOHN FRYE
CINCINNATI—Lipstick and powder may identify a pilot of the AAF's Ferrying division—otherwise there's no telling. A crew chief made this discovery at one of the AAF's bases. A big cargo plane was waiting to be ferried. The sergeant, with hash marks halfway to his ears, batted his eye and demanded indignantly, "where's the pilots?" The crew chief had every right to expect a couple of men to take the plane to its next stop. A couple of women came, a couple of WASPs. The story, as Nancy Harkness Love, director of ferrying pilots of the Women's Air Force Service Pilots, told it at the Ferrying division's headquarters here, is that the sergeant eventually settled himself in the plane and stared at a picture of his girl for the duration of the quiet flight, later admitting that there wasn't as much mystery to flying the big boys as has been made out. Successor To WAFS Mrs. Love disclosed that since September, 1942, when the predecessor Women's Auxiliary Ferrying Squadron (WAFS) was organized, the number of women flying for the Army has grown manifold. The new group includes two qualified to handle, as first pilots, Flying Fortresses, and plenty ticketed to fly the hottest of the fighter planes. "Flying the big planes isn't so much a matter of strength," said Mr. Love, "as of coordination—putting the right effort in the right place." So far the WASPs are restricted to flying in the United States and Africa, with 20 percent of the area of the world, has but 7.5 percent of the population.

YOU DIDN'T ask anybody to fight for you or die for you. Of course not. You ordered them to. You ordered them to make this sacrifice through your representative in Congress just as surely as if you had handed each of them a gun. Think that over. There is only one decent thing to do for them in return. Bring them home as quickly as possible. That costs money—astronomical billions of dollars to convert all of our sons, brothers, and friends into the best fed, best dressed, best armed, hardest hitting fighting army in the world. No one has ordered or will order you to buy Bonds. You are asked to invest in a Victorious America! You are asked to invest in at least one extra hundred dollar Series E War Bond in the 4th War Loan. That will cost you $75.00 and you get back at maturity $100.00, or $4.00 for every $3.00 you have invested. Put that 4th War Loan Sticker in your window today. Coach Brown Seeking Aggressive Guard To Replace Wise

QUAKER CAGE STAR WILL TRANSFER TO YOUNGSTOWN RAYEN

Lanney, Appedisian, Stoudt Are Prospects, But All Will Get Chance

With the basketball season better than half over, Coach Herb Brown faces the problem of replacing one of his veteran starters, it was learned last night when Ray Wise, letterman from last season, announced his intention to transfer to Youngstown Rayen High school to finish his senior year.

Brown's problem will be to find a replacement for his second highest point-getter and to secure a player who will bear the burden of originating most of the offensive play for the Quakers. Wise, averaging nine points per game this year, has been the mainstay in the ball handling done in the back court and has been the most aggressive guard Brown has had this season.

In seeking a likely starter Brown will probably work with Francis Lanney, who has been filling the other guard spot this year, Jimmie Appedisian, diminutive cager who has shown improvement in the last few games, and lanky Bill Stoudt, another Junior with some experience in the job this season.

Brown Is Optimistic
Coupled with Wait Brian and Frank Enriken, the two remaining lettermen, the new starter, whoever he may be, must develop a reasonable amount of scoring power or the Quaker hopes for many more victories will be slim, Brown said last night. However, the Quaker mentor believes a replacement can be found among his substitutes and expressed the opinion that the added responsibility on the new man's shoulders may bring out the confidence and scoring ability that have been lacking in the three prospects.

Appedisian has shown an aggressiveness this year that may land him the post, if his offensive and defensive tactics can be developed fast enough to give the locals the needed punch. Lanney has shown improvement and has a well coordinated action that may bring him to the front-offensively. Bill Stoudt hasn't shown much action this year but has a potentially long shot that might become deadly if given the opportunity to develop under fire. Another possibility the Salem mentor may fall back upon is that of shifting Charles "Mutt" Schaeffer from a corner assignment to the back court post. Schaeffer, though not a starter so far, performed better than most of the squad in the Lincoln game and possesses a good defensive style.

Give Entire Squad a Chance
The shift to the back court wouldn't be an easy one for the Junior forward, but Brown believes it might be done if necessary. However, the coach plans to start again with experiments and will not definitely announce any starting lineup until game time Friday. He intends to give the entire squad a chance at the open position and has expectations of finding a good man for the job.

Wise may possibly appear here Friday with the Rayen outfit, although it is questionable whether he would be ready to perform with them at such a short notice. Coach Joe Horn's squad has six lettermen back from last year, and though weakened by illness most of this season, has turned in a creditable record.

The former Quaker participated in basketball in Salem from his first year in high school until now, playing varsity fall for two seasons. Wise also was a member of Salem's football varsity for the past three seasons.

ALONG THE SPORTS TRAIL

BASEBALL BRIEFS
News from winter-entrenched baseball circles is flowing with the usual between-seasons fluency. Again this year spring training will be done in more northerly regions because of wartime travel restrictions.

The Cleveland Indians will be en-camped March 15 at Bloomington, Ind., where they will engage in a 14 game exhibition schedule with two other major league clubs. Seven games are slated with the Pirates of Pittsburgh and five with Cincinnati. The Indians will also tangle twice with the Indians of Indianapolis, an American Association squad.

RAYEN HERE FRIDAY
From Youngstown next Friday will come Joe Horn's Rayen squad, boasting six veterans from last season and a fair record to boot. The Quakers will have a tough game on their hands, in spite of Rayen's two losses over the weekend. The Youngstowners were downed Friday by Woodrow Wilson 52-28, and fell before Farrell, Pa., Saturday, 42-20.

MIAMI LEADS CAGERS
The Redskins from down in Oxford, Ohio, pulled a fast one Saturday night when they ran over Indiana of Big Ten fame, 52-50. It was the first time in over two years that an Indiana outfit has been beaten on its home court. Miami has played havoc with the Hoosiers once before this year in a different activity—trying the Hoosiers 0-0 in football.

So far this year in basketball, no Ohio aggregation can approach the record compiled by the high-flying Indians. Miami has won 11 games without dropping a single one.

PLAYERS NEED SHOES
"Shoelers" basketball players are still to be seen in the league games at the Memorial building. Joe Kelley reports that about a dozen pairs of good shoes were received after his last call for the unbuyable product, but he can find numerous users for any others that may be around in closets and attics. If more are available give Kelley a ring at the building and arrangements will be made to have them picked up.

LIVELIER TENNIS BALLS
With spring and smoothly rolled courts a long way off, tennis fans welcome the news that a new and snappier ball to replace the "re-claims" of the past two years is being manufactured. Balls are being made of synthetic rubber and reports say there will be plenty for all.

The balls of the past two seasons have been made from reclaimed rubber and were definitely on the "dead" side, but the synthetic ovals promise to be far more lively. Still not up to pre-war standards, the synthetics will sell at the same price as both the other types.

OHIO HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALL FRONT ACTIVE LAST WEEK

Play Marked by Individual Performances, Winning Streaks, First Defeats

By FRITZ HOWELL
COLUMBUS, Jan. 25.—Scintillating individual performances, extended winning streaks, first defeats, War Bonds for points, and heavy-fouling contests marked last week's set of games in Ohio's high school basketball race.

Steubenville, Monroe, Cleveland Shaw and Buckskin were among the squads meeting defeat for the first time after winning anywhere from six to nine games in a row, while Gene Kinsley of Hartsville put on a one-man show, scoring 36 points to beat Uniontown single-handed, 71-35, although he played only three-quarters of the fray.

Newark's mighty Wildcats, State Class A champions, ran their season's winning streak to 12 and their two-year record to 25 in a row, with an easy 43-23 conquest of Coshocton, but Martins Ferry, semifinalist in Class A, stayed in the running with a 45-44 thriller over Wheeling, W. Va.

Morris (Bo) Braun of Amherst, all-Ohio selection a year ago, has scored 242 points in 12 games this year, almost half of his team's 535, and the school has won 11 in a row after dropping the opener to Lorain. Other individual hot-shots of the week include Dave Gray Dresden's six-foot-six center who has loomed in 180 points in eight games for an average of 23, and Kephart of middle point who scored 31 in the 56-36 win over Hoagland-Jackson.

Lincoln Takes Salem
Monroe's 11-game winning streak was halted by Middletown, 39-25, before 2343 fans; East Liverpool stopped Steubenville at nine victories, 56-47, while East Cleveland Shaw's six-game spurge ended at Cleveland Heights won 54-44. On the other hand, Canton Lincoln defeated Salem 43 to 35 for its first win in seven games.

Portsmouth's game with Ashland, Ky., was enlivened by a war bond drive at which fans agreed to buy a $500 war bond for each point scored by the Trojans. Capt. Don Monk made 'em pay $9.000 with his 18 points as Portsmouth won 35-32. The Trojans send three regulars to the army this week.

Marion Harding upset Ashland 56-47, sending those teams into a tie for the NCO title with four wins and a defeat. A total of 58 personal fouls were called, 33 against Marion and 25 against Ashland, and eight players were elected from the contest.

Middletown's win last week assured the Polar Bears of a share of the Van Wert county league title for the seventh straight year, while Utica which won 23 in a row last year before bowing to the Class B champion Yorkville team in the regionals, stretched its win streak to eight this year, and its 38th in a row in the Licking county loop.

Undeclared Quintets
Among the undeclared Quintets among the more than 1100 playing this year, with the number of victories, are:

0	Heights, Loudonville; 7-Independence and Dayton Chaminade. Other unbeaten clubs are Anderson township, Fredericktown, Tallmadge, Bellevue, Tipp City and Covington.
7	Teams beaten but once include such powerhouses as Columbian
9	Amherst, Middletown, Massillon
0	Hartsville, Monroe, Port Clinton

Teams beaten but once include such powerhouses as Columbiana, Amherst, Middletown, Massillon, Hartsville, Monroe, Port Clinton, North Ridge, Warren, Lancaster and Lima St. Gerard. Twice defeated are Clearview, East Liverpool, Toronto, Columbus St. Charles, Canton Lehman, Springfield and Mansfield.

Milwaukee to Exhibit

Brewing Craft Relics

MILWAUKEE — Brewery relics epitomizing the part that Milwaukee has played in one of the nation's largest industries were being collected here at the county historical museum to form the nucleus of a permanent exhibit.
Milwaukee's early reputation was based on its being one of the key beer cities of the nation. In the 1880s, more than 30 breweries were producing beer, and though today the number is closer to 10, the city still is a leader in the nation.
The exhibit will include such relics as a tavern table, complete with places for card-players' beer steins; a huge brass "gobson"; colorful steins; several beer signs of the prohibition era and some relics of recent vintage—beer cans.
Occupying a place of honor will be busts of two noted brewers, Philip Jung and Valentine Blatz.
Research by museum director, Albert Schuabel, has revealed that despite German dominance of breweries in the state, the founder of the first brewery were three Welshmen, who were supplanted by a German soon after their organization of the Milwaukee Brewery.

With the current taxes in Britain, it would take an income of $400,000 to yield a net income of $25,000.

Antimony is almost useless in its pure state, but combined with other metals is an important industrial aid.

Writes Book on Bricker
COLUMBUS, Jan. 25.—Karl B. Pauly, political writer for the Ohio State Journal, is author of a biography of Gov. John W. Bricker entitled "Bricker of Ohio: The Man and His Record" to be published shortly by G. P. Putnam's Sons of New York.

the measure, always being balked by a southern filibuster. He also advocated federal legislation to outlaw the poll tax as a qualification for voting.

His death reduced the Democratic-held seats in the senate to 57, with the Republicans holding 37 and the Progressive party one.

However, Indiana's Democratic governor, Henry F. Schricker, doubtless will appoint a Democrat to serve out the year remaining of Van Nuys' term.

Van Nuys, whose home was Indianapolis, unseated James E. Watson, veteran Republican, in the 1932 Democratic landslide and was re-elected in 1938.

His state party organization had opposed him because of his bitter fight on some New Deal measures, notably court reorganization.

Employees in Sen. Van Nuys' office said he had not complained of illness, but remained away from the senate yesterday with a slight cold. He attended last Friday's session.

Suffered Heart Attack
Floyd J. Mattice, Indianapolis attorney who has been serving as counsel in the liquor investigation, said the family had attempted to persuade the senator to let them call a doctor last night, but he had refused, saying he "wasn't really sick."

V. H. Parks, an employee of Van Nuys' Vienna home, found the senator's body at 5 a. m. and immediately notified Mrs. Van Nuys' mother, Mrs. Louise Krug, who is visiting here. Mrs. Van Nuys is in Arizona.

Mattice said a heart attack was believed the cause of death.

Van Nuys was a graduate of Earlham college and Indiana law school, and served as United States district attorney for southern Indiana from 1920 to 1922. His public life also included service in the Indiana legislature and state Democratic organization.

The senator's only son, William, is a Naval Air Corps lieutenant serving overseas.

himself to supervise the early operations ashore.

(Morocco radio, quoting unverified German reports, said Littorio had been captured. Littorio is 12 miles east of Nettuno.

The German communiqué said Allied attacks had been repulsed in Southern Italy, and that three Allied destroyers, and one merchant ship had been sunk off Anzio, with three other vessels probably destroyed and 11 transports damaged.)

It now is known the 90th Panzer Grenadiers were thrown into the Garigliano sector to support the German 94th infantry division, which took the brunt of the original British assault across the river and then charged in counter blows. The 94th is estimated to have lost at least 50 per cent of its combat strength in these battles.

Beyond Enemy Shellfire
Patrols were active on the Eighth army front and there was considerable mortar fire in the Adriatic coastal area.

By driving inland 12 miles the Allies have put the Nettuno-Anzio bridgehead out of effective German artillery range. A few enemy shells, believed to be from German 170 millimeter guns firing 15 miles, landed on the beach at Anzio yesterday.

(BBC said the bridgehead is about 15 miles wide.)

A headquarters officer declared Hitler "desperately needing a triumph," may decide to throw great forces into Italy and tell his generals they must produce a victory at any cost.

Heavy bombers blasted rail yards at Vratsna, near the Bulgarian capital of Sofia, and also struck at Skopje in Yugoslavia yesterday.

Despite bad weather, fighters and fighter bombers maintained a cover over convoys and the invasion beaches in Italy as well as roads behind the German lines.

A number of Nazi bombers attacking Allied shipping were shot down.

Fifteen enemy planes were destroyed during the day, and 11 Allied craft were lost.

Britain and U. S. Deny Recognition To Bolivia Regime

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, Jan. 25.—Britain today joined the United States in refusing to recognize the new government of Bolivia. Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told commons he believed the coup in that country had been aided by German agents.

Eden said the British government was "in step" with the United States in respect both to diplomatic recognition and economic action and added the British minister-designate to La Paz would not proceed to his post.

The U. S. policy of non recognition of the Bolivian revolutionary junta headed by Maj. Gualberto Villarroel was announced last night.

Referring to the coup d'etat Dec. 20 against the government of Gen. Enrique Penaranda which previously had declared war on Germany, Eden said:

"Information available to us indicates this development is connected with activities of subversive groups hostile to the cause of the United Nations which are at work in the western hemisphere.

During questioning Eden was asked several times if there was any evidence the subversive movement in South America was organized or stimulated through Spain, or involved falangists.

The foreign secretary declared, "I believe these activities are organized in the main by German agents."

Asked whether he would try to find out what is being done not only in Bolivia but in other parts of the continent, including Uruguay and Brazil, Eden pointed out there is no German embassy in either Uruguay or Brazil, but added, "there is a German embassy in South America and I hope one day we shall see that go. What that happens I think the position will improve."

Eden referred, obviously, to Argentina, the only country in the western hemisphere still maintaining diplomatic relations with the Nazis.)

Ferguson's statement said that on the basis of a preliminary examination "it appears the treasurer's office is out of balance for a substantial amount."

"State examiners will start to work immediately to rush a complete audit of the treasurer's books so that the examination can be brought to a successful conclusion as soon as possible."

The Traders Class is financially supported by federal and state funds, and the Salem board of education matches the amount thus received.
